PRESENTED BY THE DELAWARE STATE FIRE SCHOOL

WELCOME TO CAMP FURY DELAWARE!

Dear Families and Campers,

Through the support of the Delaware State Fire School, we can hold an interactive, engaging and inspiring camp for the next generation of fearless young women. Camp Fury Delaware introduces the field of emergency services to young women early in their lives, and supports the women in public safety fields. Camp Fury isn't "just" a summer camp, it is a leap in the right direction for inclusivity among public safety professionals in and around our state.

During our first summer in 2017, Camp Fury Delaware had 42 campers and 40 staff. In 2018 we grew to have 60 campers and 50 staff from 42 different organizations and agencies. As we bound into 2019, our values remain the same: Courage – for campers to try something new and different; Confidence - for campers to feel self-assured in their own abilities; and Character - for campers to develop their mental and moral qualities, and to have strength in their originality.

Welcome to Camp Fury Delaware, and thank you for your ongoing support!

VISION

To identify the passion young women possess that motivates their curiosity to join the emergency services arena. In turn, we provide them a safe and supportive space to explore their interests. Camp Fury Delaware offers young women an opportunity to experience a weekend of simulated activities that represent what emergency responders experience, daily. Throughout a high energy weekend, remarkable female professionals from a variety of response agencies talk to and train campers through hands-on task application and exercises. Our campers will gain self-confidence, leadership skills, and challenge themselves physically and mentally while making new friends. Camp Fury is a stepping stone to a more inclusive, diverse Delaware.

CAMP FURY: A HISTORY

Breaking Down Barriers Since 2009

2009 Assistant Chief Laura Baker of the Tucson (AZ) Fire Department and Chief Cheryl Horvath of the Mountain Vista (AZ) Fire Department in the Northwest Fire Rescue District received grant funding from the Women's Foundation of Southern Arizona to facilitate a girl's fire camp for the young women in the community.

2010 Both departments partnered with the Girl Scouts of Southern Arizona to sponsor the camp for high school girls, ages 13 to 17. Twenty-three young women participated in the program, which was taught by women firefighters from all over the region.

2011 Camp Fury - Yuma (AZ) made its debut, becoming the second in what would be many girls camps across the country.

2012 Both of the Camp Fury programs, Tucson and Yuma, continued to expand and grow, providing increased hands-on activities, demonstrations, and drills.

2013 Camp Fury expanded its subjects to include women in other public safety professions, such as law enforcement.

2014 Five squad leaders who were past campers, served as camp leaders, and representatives from Charlotte (NC) Fire Department visited in an effort to replicate the program in their community.

2016 Alumni campers continue to return as camp leaders, and the program has become a model for others in the country.

2019 Camp Fury is celebrating its 10th year empowering young women!

2017

"Anything is Possible"

Vince "Vinnie" Miller, a Senior Instructor at the Delaware State Fire School (DSFS), partnered with Sarah Davis Highberger, also with the DSFS, to formulate a similar program to Camp Fury for young women ages 13-17.

With the full support of Director Biff Newnam, and the approval to use the 'Camp Fury' name from Chief Horvath and Chief Baker, the 2-day, day camp was born in Dover, Delaware. Women in Public Safety careers from across Delaware, and even over state lines, joined at Camp Fury Delaware on August 19-20th, 2017.

Campers in the inaugural year of Camp Fury Delaware participated in and learned about:

- Physical Fitness
- Firefighting & Fire Investigation
- Hazardous Materials
- EMS and First Aid
- Police K9s and DUI Field Tests
- Emergency Management

In addition to hands-on activities, campers attended a panel Q&A session to listen to successful women in public safety fields share their stories about their determination to get to where they are.

The weekend concluded with a family dinner and closing ceremony where campers were recognized for their accomplishments by camp staff, Lt. Governor Bethany Hall-Long, National Guard Adjutant General Carol Timmons, and Congresswoman Lisa Blunt-Rochester.

2018

"Born for This"

Year #2 of empowering and encouraging young women to get involved in public safety careers began with adding an additional day, and a two-night stay over at the DE State Fire School. These additions provided an immersive experience to the 60 campers.

Professional women from all areas of public safety supported the young women throughout the weekend, including a second appearance from the Honorable Congresswoman Lisa Blunt-Rochester and a first visit from our friends at FEMA Region III, including their Regional Administrator, MaryAnn Tierney.

Campers learned about hoses and hydrants, fire extinguishers, ladders, CPR and first aid. They watched a police K9 demonstration, and ran through an obstacle course set up by the DE Department of Corrections, which included handcuffing! The girls got to troubleshoot with a Hazardous Materials scenario, ran a decontamination station, and competed in teams against each other in a bucket brigade challenge.

Nighttime activities included making s'mores, working with a comedy group, watching a movie, among other things. The camp concluded again with a family dinner and closing ceremony.
